

From: Noah Spitzer-Williams <noahsw@axon.com>
Sent: 5/2/2024 4:10:30 PM
To: Robert Younger
Cc: Brian C. Gossard; Bussert, Jason C
Subject: Re: TechCrunch article

 External Email  Sending Account is from outside your Organization

Thx but I'd probably just leave it up to us. Hopefully it just blows over. I'd expect TechCrunch to be retracting or updating their article soon anyways.

--

NOAH SPITZER-WILLIAMS
Sr. Principal Product Manager, Draft One

AXON.COM

From: Robert Younger <ryounger@fcgov.com>
Date: Thursday, May 2, 2024 at 12:43 PM
To: Noah Spitzer-Williams <noahsw@axon.com>
Cc: Brian C. Gossard <bcgossard@lafayette.in.gov>, Bussert, Jason C <jason.bussert@okc.gov>
Subject: Re: TechCrunch article

Do we need to reach out to any sources who have interest recently and make sure they understand what's going on or leaving that up to Axon?

Sent from my iPhone

On May 2, 2024, at 1:39 PM, Noah Spitzer-Williams <noahsw@axon.com> wrote:

Hey gents,

Someone on Microsoft's documentation team made a big screw-up today, causing this to happen:
<https://techcrunch.com/2024/05/02/microsoft-bans-u-s-police-departments-from-using-enterprise-ai-tool/>

Fear not, Microsoft has already corrected the mistake. Their Open AI ban was intended to be for face recognition only. Draft One is safe and sound. But in case you get contacted by the media, feel free to either point them to Microsoft's updated documentation or send them to us.

Happy Thursday! =)

Noah

--

NOAH SPITZER-WILLIAMS
Sr. Principal Product Manager, Draft One

AXON.COM